authorized, and those would be within the levy limits as they are for all other school districts. Those were kind of extraneous sections that we missed. I would say that from...from a purely legislative standpoint that absolutely the most important change in the bill is the clear delay of the effects of LB 271 to the next calendar year. Thank you.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Senator Wickersham, you're recognized to open on the committee amendments. (AM2432, Legislative Journal page 710.)

SENATOR WICKERSHAM: Thank you, Mr. President. The committee amendments are fairly extensive. Again, we have incorporated a number of provisions that came before the Revenue Committee. We're attempting to get these into one place so that we can deal with them. Some of them are so technical that it would almost make you cry to read them and to contemplate what they mean; others obviously are of a more substantive nature. We've incorporated the provisions of LB 1188, for example. That was a technical bill brought to us by the Property Tax Administrator's Office. Parts of that bill, of course, are in that category that they're so technical they would make you cry, but there are others that people I think will see some benefit and reduction and ease of administration of the statutes. One of the changes that would be of interest to lawyers who do probate work is that we're removing a requirement that you file the estate inventory with the assessor. You already have to file that with the county court. If you have any taxable property that's real property, you don't...real property doesn't go away in an estate. That's still going to be listed. And if you have any depreciable personal property, that's going to show up under the general statutes in any event. There's really no need to file that inventory with the assessor. It's just an extra piece of paper. In fact, I'm not sure if any...very many people do it. There is a change that says that the Property Tax Administrator, rather than the Department of Revenue, will value minerals. That's an example of a kind of a transfer of function. Property Tax Administrator rather than Department of Revenue will develop a form for mobile home transfers and would continue to monitor that process. There's also a change that also relates a switch from the Property Tax Administrator to the...or from the Department of Revenue to the Property Tax Administrator that
